

Pegasus

Oxford-based Pegasus Theatre is a pioneer in participatory arts, sparking creativity and imagination in young people from all backgrounds. They will be joined by Emma Boor with her brand new Puppets Go Wild show, Hey Little Bird, packed full of puppetry, songs and lots of ways to join in, and Teresa Heapy who will be reading from the latest book in her award-winning Very Little series – Very Little Rapunzel.

Pegasus

Pegasus Theatre has sparked creativity and imagination in young people from all backgrounds for over 40 years through an exceptional programme of participation at the heart of a professional theatre presenting and producing inspirational drama, dance and music. Based in East Oxford, it offers weekly classes for over 600 young people a year, delivers a range of projects in the theatre and off site, and gives invaluable support to new and emerging artists.

Hey Little Bird

Join puppeteer Emma Boor in her fancy hat shop as she tells the touching tale of a freshly hatched bird and his search to find his mum. It's hard to know who you really are with so many different types of birds out there! The show contains innovative puppetry (with birds made from a multitude of hats!), songs and music and lots of ways to join in. Perfect for the fledgling theatre goer! Emma will also be leading bird puppet making workshops after the performance.

The Story Tree

Join Oxford children's author Teresa Heapy for story time under the weeping ash tree. Teresa will be reading from the latest book in her award-winning Very Little series – Very Little Rapunzel.

Very Little Rapunzel is little – VERY little. She also has VERY long hair and she refuses to have a haircut...until she gets NITS!
